The pictorial theme of this year's annual is to portray the student body in its developing process. The annual is a chronological approach to the witnessing of maturity of each individual student. The student is our concern and his growth at La Salle is our picture story.

The Student Body at Mess

The Administration Molds Us

The Faculty and the Administration established at La Salle High School is one of unity and sincerity. This ever expanding nucleus of Christian Brothers and competent lay teachers is dedicated to the educational development of the student body. They give the students four years of academic training and preparation so that we may be able to become Christian leaders and men of foresight and maturity.

The Faculty's influence on the student is not only manifested in the classroom. The faculty sets the school policies concerning social activities, sports, and discipline. The faculty leads, moderates, and advises the students to become "guardians of Christian truth."

Men to Guard Our Faith . . .

Reverend Brother Timothy Jerome, F.S.C., M.A.
Provincial of the San Francisco
District of the Brothers of the Christian Schools

Brother Stephen Martin, F.S.C., M.A.

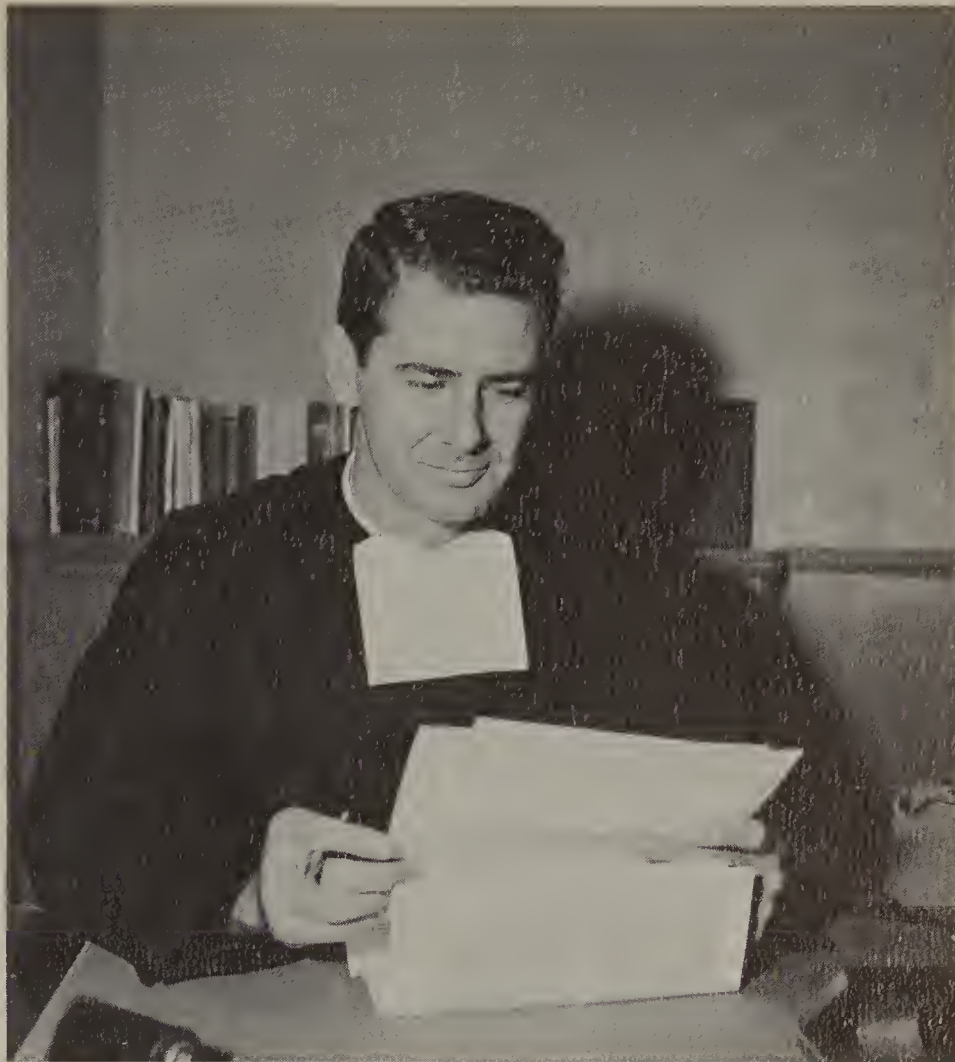

University of California
Principal

As the Principal of La Salle, Brother Martin has the responsibility of directing the growth of the school. This direction takes the form of both physical and spiritual encouragement and discipline.

In the physical sphere is the attention to the athletic needs of the student body. Brother Martin must see that these needs are satisfied and that the student body grows strong in body.

More importantly his guidance takes the form of academic and moral philosophy. It is important that the mind not be allowed to vegetate while the body grows, but rather grow in conjunction with the body and thus form a mature man.

Brother Martin, then is the person to whom the success or failure of La Salle might be attributed. If in the final analysis those boys who have graduated from La Salle are still boys then charge it to their failure, but if they are men then charge their success to their school and from there to its principal.

Men to Shape Our Morals . . .

Brother Richard Emery, F.S.C., M.A. (Cand.)

University of San Francisco
Vice-Principal

Brother Emery, as Vice Principal and direct subordinate of Brother Martin, is charged with the carrying out of the Principal's philosophy.

As Dean of Studies, Brother Emery must carry the philosophy of the school into the realm of academic policy. He must evaluate the program of studies and make such changes or additions as will aid the student in his mental growth.

In his capacity as Discipliner it is the task of the Brother Vice-Principal to insure that the student body maintains an attitude both healthy for growth of knowledge, and satisfactory for the enjoyment of high school.

Brother Emery as Guidance Director, finally must see that the growth of the students is in fact a reality and that they will become men.

The Proving Ground

The student council is an association that serves as the medium between the represented student body and the faculty. The Council coordinates and approves student body activities as well as efficiently initiating programs of its own. From the functioning of this organization the individual student learns and experiences what school government can do for him and he gains an opportunity and the experience to express his personal views on school matters. Any student can introduce a motion during a Council meeting and it has become customary for the club and class representatives to vote as their organizations want them to vote. The Student Council directly improves scholarship and close student fellowship. It acts as an excellent outlet for the physical and social energies of the students while preparing them for their formal place in society.

for Student Leadership

Matt Cappiello, our Student Body President, is charged with the job of instilling and supporting school spirit and with representing La Salle's student body outside the school.

As President of the Student Council he can have a real influence on student policy and thus it is he who has been elected by the students to govern them.

The Roots of Student Growth, the Student Body Leaders.

Among Tom Powers' duties as Student Body Vice-President is the Chairmanship of the Student Advisory Board. This is a main form of liason between the student body and the administration.

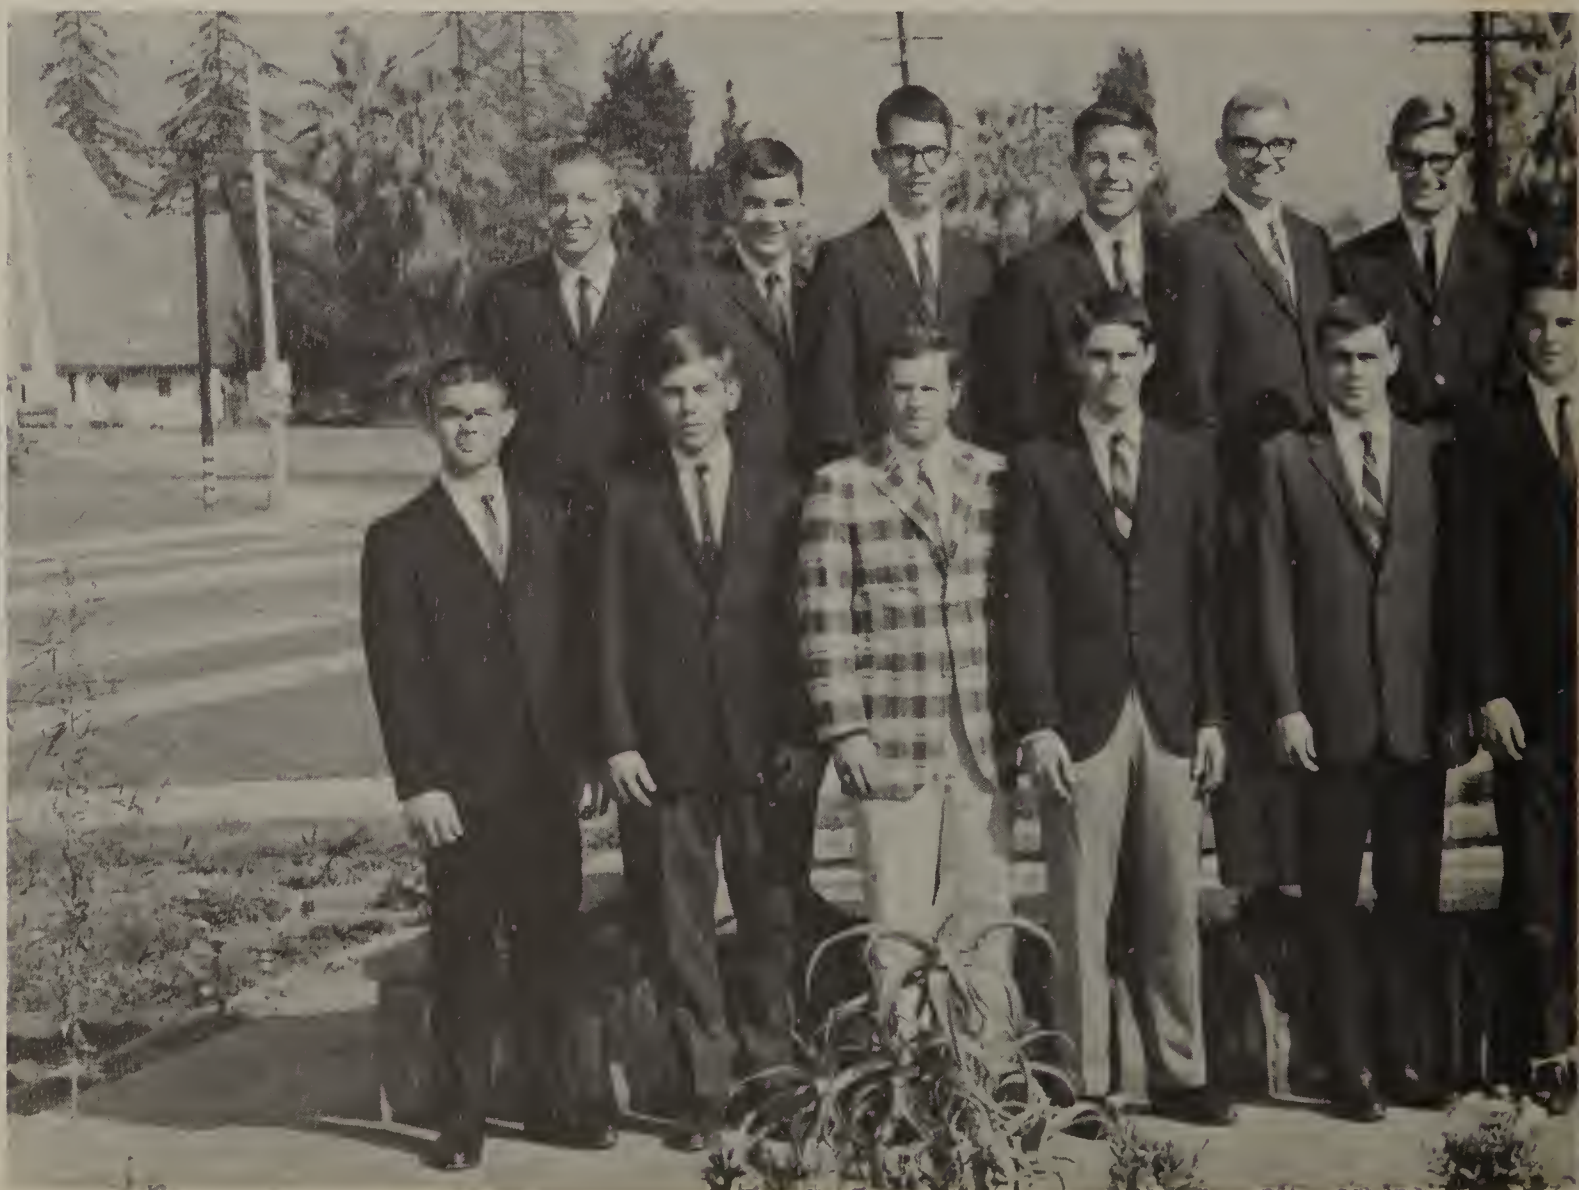

Tom is one of the more active and outspoken members of the student body. He is expected to be a moving force behind student government next year as a Senior.

La Salle High School has a strong and efficient student body government. The student body leaders are respected men who prepare and organize the numerous activities of the Student Council. It is this body that aids the Administration in making La Salle a better high school.

Advisory Board, Voice of the Students

Tom Powers introducing an ambitious motion at one of the frequent Student Council Meetings.

A sudden disturbance in this Student Council Meeting arouses the curiosity of the members.

The function of the Student Council is to secure for the students a significant part in the government of the school.

These meetings are open to all the students giving them the opportunity to learn of the many student activities proposed before this Council. All decisions are made by the various representatives of the clubs and organizations in attendance at these meetings.

Learning to Lead

The freshman, having left the elevated throne of grammar school, assumes the lowly state of a bewildered watcher. He is often too confused and unadjusted to successfully participate in school activities while he is adapting to his new environment. It is during the sophomore year that he begins to mature and to more easily donate his talents to the school. As a sophomore he resolves much of his earlier confusion and discovers that finally he has become an integral part of the school. The junior year, however, is the real period of transitional social adjustment. It is during this year that he must assume responsibility and begin to lead. The junior year is the time of both cooperation and constructive leadership.

Providing Service to the

The organizations at La Salle serve to round out the student's personality by providing him with an opportunity to co-ordinate and execute his original ideas. Freshmen may meet many new friends and learn from the experience of the upperclassmen while they work to improve the school. Sophomores and juniors who join organizations especially suited for their interest and abilities gain the great satisfaction of producing objects of lasting value as they strive for utility and knowledge. The senior who experiences a position of leadership and responsibility finds that his knowledge of himself and others assumes a deeper and more functional role in his life. This year we have been truly fortunate in the scope and quality of our extra-curricular activities.

Since the Yearbook is full of memories it is the hardest to create of all publications and the editors have a correspondingly difficult job. However, Atlas-like they have shouldered the burden. They are (l. to r.) in all their courageousness: Steve Orr (editor), Jim Jarvis (Sport's Editor), Jim Blackstock (assistant editor) and Joe Marshall (photography editor).

The Business of Remembering . . .

A division of the Yearbook, the Photography Staff has supplied many of the pictures in this Yearbook. This staff also supplies photographs for the Lance, publicity shots for city newspapers, and pictures for students at reasonable costs. The brochure about La Salle that was printed this year featured photographs taken by these photographers.

All pictures taken by them are also processed and printed, thus giving the staff members a chance to develop skill in a photo lab. Student processing also allows for quicker and more custom service.

Math and Science Club

The Math and Science Club, a chartered member of the Junior Engineering Technical Society, offers the student who is interested in the scientific fields a chance to get together with others who have his same interests. As a group they can discuss theories and concepts of science that they as a group would like to know more about. As a group they can work on projects to increase and strengthen their knowledge. Two of these projects this year have been a transistorized stroboscope for the Physics lab, and the construction of a missile type research vehicle. At right, the president, Joe Marshall, explains a facet of an upcoming project to the moderator and other members.

Unique is the one word which best describes the activities and spirit of L'Alliance Collegienne. Through the efforts of the individual members and Mr. Robert Alcorn, its founder, the club has become one of the most outstanding and original organizations of its kind in Southern California.

Among the club's accomplishments are top honors awarded it for original plays performed in French at the Mt. St. Mary's Language Festival. Winning these awards for the past four years, has enhanced the club.

The magazine Polyglot derives its name from Greek, and it means many-tongued. Its purpose is to stimulate an added interest in the foreign languages. Moderated by Mr. Robert Alcorn, the club has successfully published two editions of its magazine. The Polyglot serves as another medium to gather interest in the foreign languages.

The literary contribution of the magazine is greatly appreciated here at La Salle.

Polyglot Staff

Gary Figueroa, Gary DiSana, John Brown, Mike Manning, and Joe Saraci are each discussing the literary donations from each of their language representations.

President Jim Keese, Secretary Jeff Pike, and Vice President Steve McLaughlin listen as Treasurer Vince Duffy explains the financial situation of the club.

The Lettermen's Club was comprised of approximately forty varsity lettermen this year. The goals of the club were to instill a spirit of athletics throughout the school, to aid the athletic department in whatever way possible, and to publicize the school's athletic program to neighboring grammar schools. To fulfill these aims, the club conducted an intramural program in the school, officiated at track meets, ushered at basketball games, published programs for these games, and also sponsored a very successful grammar school basketball tournament as well as a grammar school track meet. The members worked zealously in these and other activities to mark the Lettermen's Club as one of the most active organizations in the school.

LANCE

The Student Newspaper

This year marks only the second year of existence for the LANCE, the student newspaper.

The LANCE was printed six times this year, and a variety of innovations contributed to its success. The use of a new format and layout techniques, the introduction of a feature column of a popular and humorous nature, the use of a feature cartoon, and a higher quality of photographs, all contributed to the success of this year's LANCE.

The goal of the student newspaper is founded upon service. It serves the students by informing and amusing them. It provides a forum for student opinion, and recognizes deserving individuals. It seeks to solidify school spirit by stimulating interest in all student activities, and generating pride in the school's accomplishments. Its second function is service to its own members. The LANCE staff member learns valuable lessons about himself and other people while developing qualities of leadership, responsibility, and co-operation.

The LANCE contains five working staffs: Feature, News, Sports, Business and Production.

The Feature, Sports, and News staffs write all of the articles for the paper. Members of the staffs interview, and investigate the news of La Salle. The concern of the Business staff was advertising, which contributed nearly fifty percent of the needed capital. The Production staff worked to prepare all the copy for the printer.

Members of the LANCE were prepared for their duties by participation in the Journalism class conducted by Brother M. Martin. Selected members also participated in Journalism Field Days at the University of California. A final measure instituted by this year's staff was membership in the Catholic Press Association, which offers benefits in appraisal and loan services.

This year's final issue was produced without the aid of the graduating seniors, and is an indication of the excellent promises of next year's staff.

Art Chairman Bab Sexton was responsible for the excellent Forum bulletin board always being kept up-to-date.

The Fine Arts Forum began as a supplement to the curriculum at La Salle, a curriculum that had previously lacked in the presentation of the arts. The lack was quickly made up by an ambitious moderator and a small group of determined students. As it progressed into its second year the Forum became one of the most beneficial organizations of the student body. Its activity was common occurrence around the school and it has sponsored events ranging from Art Exhibits to Foreign Films to guest speakers. The Forum has given an opportunity to the student to participate in and become aware of the cultural events of this community and the school.

Cultural Awareness Among the Student Body

A representative of the Pasadena Art Museum is giving a talk on the appreciation and evolution of Modern Art.

The chairman of the music department at Los Angeles State College is shown here giving a combination lecture and recital on classical music.

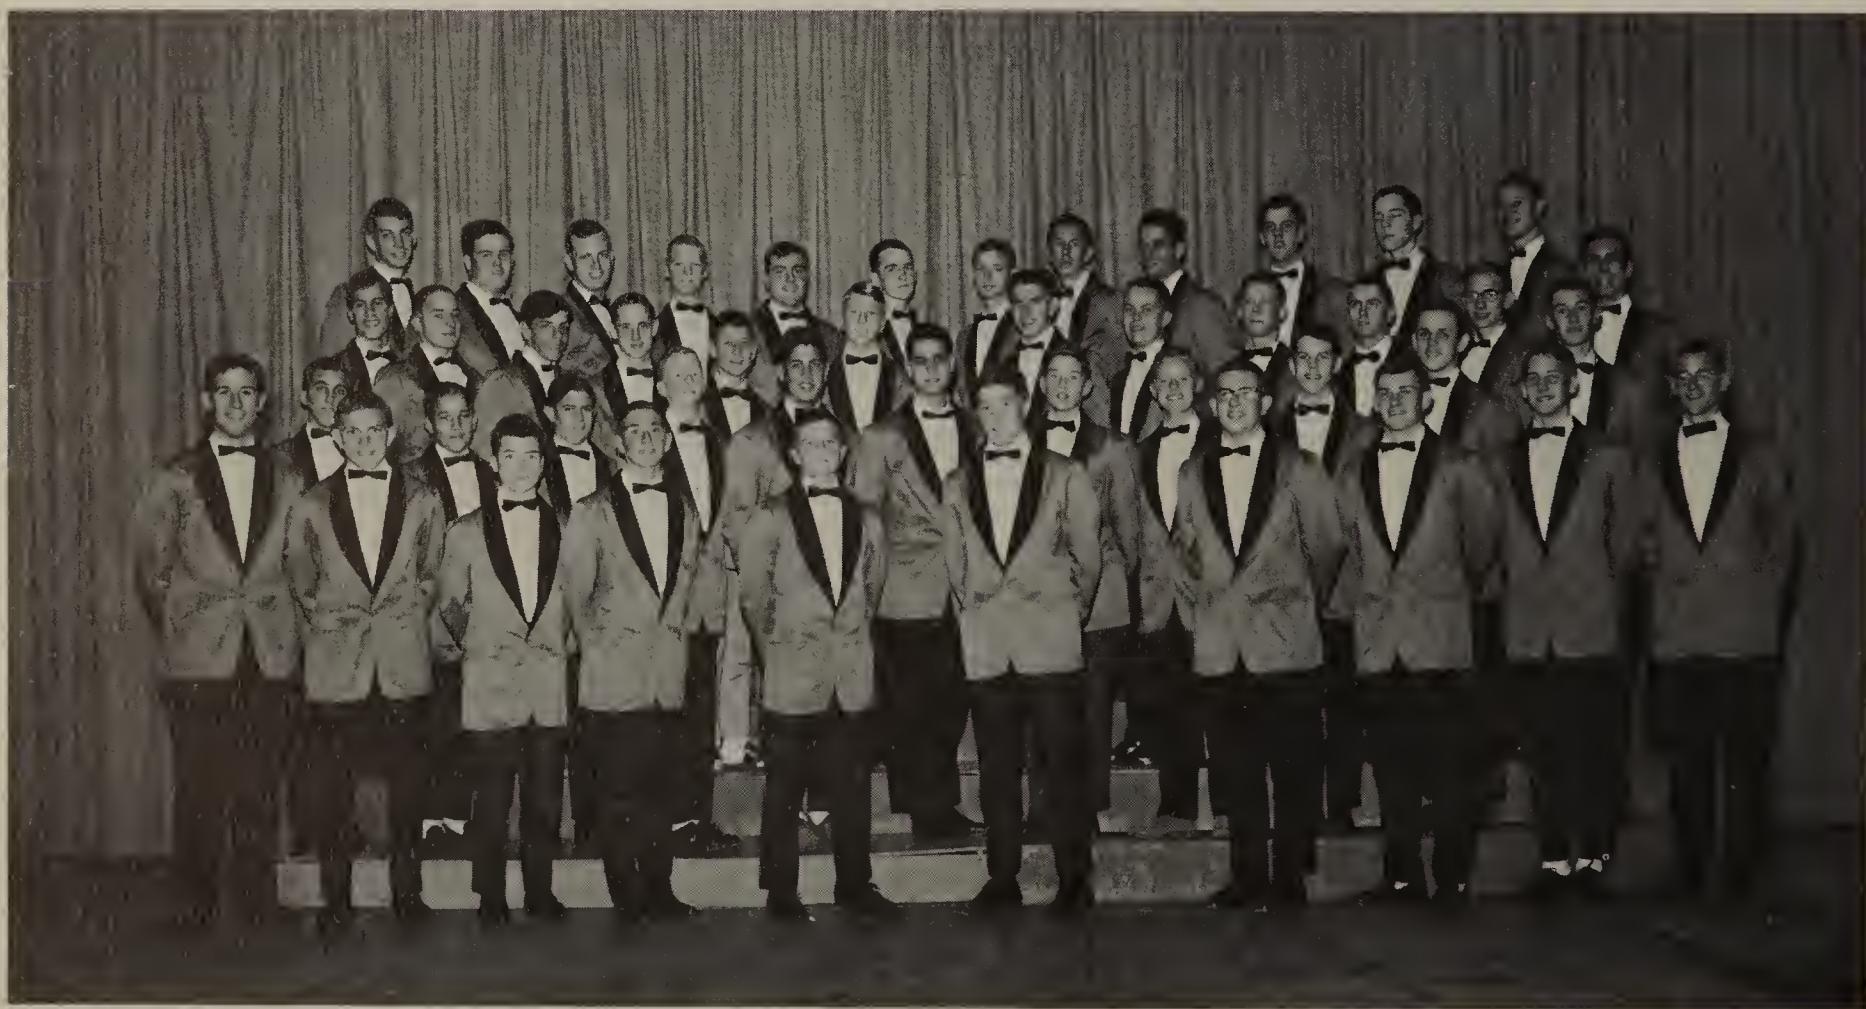

Gary DiSano, John Crawford, Tom McIntosh, Bob Teegarden, the Glee Club officers harmonizing together at the piano.

As in any prolific and worthwhile business, this year has "topped them all." The Glee Club has reached new heights with various awards, presentations, and performances.

This year commenced with an all new program of Christmas songs and Christmas performances. The Glee Club entertained such audiences as the Saint Andrews P.T.A., Immaculate Conception Women's Club, and the La Salle parents. The results were highly pleasing.

The Glee Club participated in the Invitational Choir Festival at St. Mary's Mount. The golden voiced Lancers came home with an excellent first place awarding by the judges.

The Christmas Season was made definitely more enjoyable this year by the Glee Club's program. Brother Harold is shown conducting the lads in one of their choral renditions.

Adding to the enjoyment of the presentation was the Saint Andrews Glee Club which joined the La Salle group in the finale.

Mr. Robert Alcorn, the Drama Club moderator, discusses one of the club's productions with Ron Butler, the club president.

Mr. Alcorn is now as respected a member of the faculty as a director, as he is as a teacher. His presentations invariably meet with success.

Drama Club Develops "Split Personalities"

Drama Club Officers Jae Saraci and George Schoeffel hold a production planning caucus with their senior officer Ron Butler.

Any psychiatrist of today could tell you that after Peter Rabbit was shot in the tail by Farmer Brown he was bound to become bitter. He is that same creature of the forest as "interpreted" by Terry Slavin.

Hansel and Gretel (Joe Saraci and Marianne Karbo) are incredulous as they discover the gingerbread house of the wicked witch. This scene is from the "Bad Children."

The townsfolk gather about the platform as the "Lottery" is about to take place.

The wicked Enchanter is casting spells with his magic wond.

Father and Mother (Bruce Bell and Frederica Buel) explain their intense psychological hatred for their offspring in the "Bad Children."

Stirring her brew is the wicked witch (Jane Lindenthal) as the Enchanter (Rory Moore) watches from above right.

Ed Shelton makes a dying confession to Gyppo Nolan in a scene from "The Informer." The women are played by Cathy Walshe and Dona Komorowski.

In this exciting action scene from the "Bad Children," Hansel clumsily overturns the witch's cauldron as Gretel, Father, and Mother interestedly pander the happenings.

Townspeople press in for a better view as the chances are drawn in anticipation of the lottery to follow. Carl Munteer reads the names and Frank Lester holds the box of stubs.

Honor Society Excels in Scholarship

Brother R. Emery, the Honor Society moderator, and Pete Van Kuran, Honor Society President, standing before the student Honor Roll.

The Honor Society officers Steve Ehret, Secretary; Mike Roosevelt, Vice President; Brother Emery, Pete Van Kuran and Pete Kelley, Treasurer discuss activities.

The La Salle Chapter of the National Honor Society recognizes academic excellence among the students. Members are chosen on a basis of grades, leadership qualities and participation in extra-curricular activities. Among the activities of the Honor Society are the publication of the bi-monthly Newsletter, which informs the parents of school events, and the correction of the standardized tests administered to the students. Tours and visits to surrounding colleges, as well as a trip to a noted play, were offered to members this year. The Hollywood Premiere Dance in November, and at the end of the year, the annual dinner spotlighted this year's Honor Society Calendar.

Chris Rhyon, John Spalding, and Peter Thomas (Editor) members of the Editorial staff discussing the spontaneous heteronym of the next issue.

The pursuit of literary achievement reached a new apex this year with the renewal and complete renovation of the IDYLL. Under the leadership of Peter Thomas and Brother Raphael, the magazine received an entirely new cover as well as a vastly improved format. Published twice in February and May, the IDYLL staff selected only the most original and well written works for inclusion, thus stimulating avid competition in literary accomplishment. Students from both divisions were urged to submit poetry and serious essays and stories.

Activities at La Salle serve a two-fold purpose: not only do they enable the student to exhibit and develop his talents, but they also serve to enrich his cultural background.

We are fortunate here both in having not only enthusiastic and talented students, but also moderators who lend their experience and professional touches to the work.

Many activities serve to promote school spirit and provide social activities for the student body.

Activities are the core developers here at La Salle, for no matter how time-consuming they are they serve to furnish much of the total educational maturity that the school attempts to provide.

Sports at La Salle are invaluable in uniting the student body in a bond of school spirit and competitive development. Our intramural and inter-scholastic programs in basketball, track, cross country, golf, tennis, swimming, and water polo enable both our athletes and the average school student interested in a limited participation to compete according to his individual ability. These sports provide the necessary physical and emotional outlets that channeled properly enable the participants to better profit from their studies and other activities. The immediate challenges of athletic competition develops aggressiveness and quick thinking, while the necessity of a team effort develops self-discipline. Sports is the bond of excellence between the body and mind at La Salle.

Exuberant Lancers hoist Coach Caudillo above their shoulders after successfully defending their League Championship with the first undefeated season in La Salle's history.

BOSCO TECH

After leading at halftime, the Lancers had to rally twice in the final quarter to win. At one point in the game, Bosco Tech blocked five straight shots but they were unable to take advantage of the situation.

VICTOR VALLEY

La Salle deserved a better fate but lost to Victor Valley after leading by four points with forty seconds remaining in the overtime period. The Lancers led by three points at halftime but a slow third period forced us to fight back and tie the score with four seconds remaining before losing in the overtime.

They Lead the Students

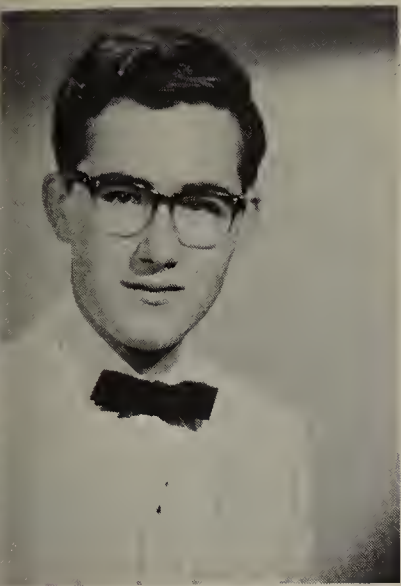

Emerging from three years of carefully guided development, the senior discovers that he has grown much since his freshman days. He has taken upon himself a new clothing of ideals and purposes. He has been presented with the finest material, a Christian approach to a liberal education, and he must decide to weave loosely or strongly this material into a cloth that will wear for the rest of his life.

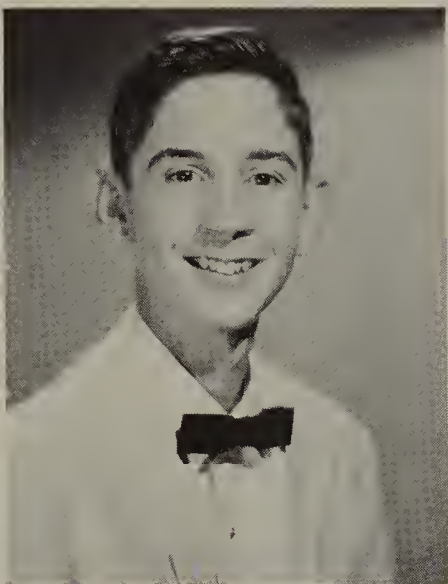

It is the senior, also, who today is carefully judged as his school's representative. He has been given the crucial role of leadership and representation. It is the senior who is to take his place in the world and prove the worth of La Salle's training.
